"I'm really looking forward to hearing these talented musicians play," says Jazz in Martinborough Music Director Lee Quayle. "When you're putting together a programme for the festival, you look for variety, quality and interest and when Kate suggested this combo I was very happy to put them on the main stage," says Lee. This will be a Friday highlight for me, he adds.

The Raven's Trio is the highly engaging combination of the talents of the "Queen of the Boogie Piano" Cindy Muggeridge on vocals and keys, Kate Marshall on almost any other instrument that can be bowed, plucked, blown or squeezed – and she sings! – and Anje Glindemann holding the groove on the drums, while offering her own vocal contributions.

Cindy Muggeridge has developed a unique style that draws on the great pianists of the blues, the classic women blues singers, a taste of the American songbook, and a freshness of approach heard in her own original songs, that tell their stories with a mixture of humour, poignancy and insight. Her duo, Raven Ravens, is a favourite at folk gigs and festivals, and now the Raven's Trio offers another opportunity to hear her captivating musical personality in a fresh musical setting.

Multi-instrumentalist Kate Marshall plays accordion, flute and violin – and also sings. She started her musical life as a classically trained pianist, but had an occasionally misguided tendency to improvise the ends of Mozart sonatas. She decided that she should find some music where that wasn't going to break the rules, and so has found a musical home playing a scintillating range of blues, cajun, Irish and jazz. She is usually found as part of the duo Bob and Kate or with the country combo Hard Candy.

Anje Glindemann plays drums and has a style that is always a key part of the group sound, – sometimes light, sometimes swinging, but always with a solid feel. Anje has the philosophy of playing the 'song' and not just the 'drums' (while actually playing the drums – and singing!). She has her own band, 'The Salty Hearts', sits in with loads of others, including Andrew London, and loves to play with the Ravens wherever possible.

JAKE BAXENDALE TRIO

3.45 – 5.30 pm

Union Square

FREE GIG!

The Jake Baxendale Trio (JB3) have been lighting up bars, clubs and stages around NZ for years, developing a deeply grooving sound with adventurous improvisational interplay.

Whilst drawing on the funk and soul jazz stylings of '50s and '60s era Blue Note recordings, JB3 bring their own flavour with their original tunes and interpretations of classic jams.

They are Jake Blaxendale (saxophone), Shaun Anderson (drums) and Daniel Hayles (organ).
